

Rabbi's Column – June 17, 2019

One of the reasons (besides very hectic schedules) for the recent lack of articles has been the tag team computer power cord problems plaguing the computers that we use here. One of them is the work computer; the other one is the family computer. For the work computer a replacement power cord did the trick. For the family computer, the replacement power cord did not resolve the issue. Fortunately, the speed at which programs can be loaded in, and the intelligence level of the individual computer (as in recognizing a very old mouse without having to put in the disk first) has improved drastically so the transition is much less painful.

The Israeli Scout group has performed for us in the past. This was usually upon our request, and they did us a favor by including Cheyenne in their route. We paid the requested amount for this favor, all of it due by sometime in May. This year, we are doing them a favor by eliminating hotel fees for two nights as they travel between two major areas in nearby states. In return for that favor, at no extra charge, they will put on a performance two days before the annual picnic (I am being deliberately vague for security reasons) in the evening [probably about 6].

On the near horizon we have the annual Jim McKinnon Food Drive for COMEA - I will get a list of what is requested before it starts in mid-July.

On the far horizon we have the beginning of Religious School in September and the High Holidays beginning at the end of that month.

May this next week be personally busy but not painfully so.
