

Rabbi's Column – March 9, 2020

The experiment this past Shabbat was successful. We had a minyan and took out two Torah scrolls. The next Shabbat morning opportunity will be May 30, which happens to be the second day of Shavuot. So that morning we will have services (which will include reading the book of Ruth and Yizkor) and if we have a minyan we will again read from two Torah scrolls. There will also be an Adult Education segment during the Kiddush Lunch – subject to be determined.

The next major holiday is Passover. Between now and then, the kitchen will be cleaned and food for the Seder will be purchased and prepared. I have also prepared a new educational component for the community Seder.

Purim thoughts take priority as I prepare this prose. May the majestic might of kindness (which is next to kingliness) be apparent in your interactions during this next week.
